

To whom it may concern,

I am the director/producer of the pilot, Miss Winn's Garden. I am also a 14-year member of the Directors Guild of America. I had a phenomenal experience working with Forrest Tuff of on Miss Winn's Garden and highly recommend him.

Forrest listened and stayed focused on his client's, aka on my, needs. Not only did he offer creative input on the edit of the project, but he was able to take information based on our conversations and the work itself to create the perfect intro to the project without any additional guidance, the first time out. I am beyond impressed with Forrest's ability to consistently "get it right."

Forrest is professional and communicative. Early on, we agreed on what would be the best way to share project files, ideas and criticisms. The open communication allowed for a space where creativity reigned in a controlled environment. This was important to me because all too often a lack of clear communication often leads to frustration and delays on a project. This was never an issue. In addition, Forrest gave accurate time estimates for completion of assignments. Thanks in large part to Forrest's project management skills, the project came in on time and just under budget.

Forrest's work ethic kept the bar high for all of post production. His goal was to make the project the best it could be. This enthusiasm and dedication was contagious and considerably influenced the final output of the project. This in and of itself made working with Forrest priceless.

Forrest consistently exceeded expectations. This is first time that Forrest and I have worked together. We have had no prior engagement, so when he came upon the project, I needed to see that he really did have the skills he purported to have...and he did. Everything that I threw Forrest's way, Forrest was able to handle with ease. So much so that I quickly learned that I could trust him (no easy task) to take my vision to the next level...and he did. His creative contributions have made the project distinctive from the first moment you lay eyes on it. And what I appreciate most is that his work complements the project and does not overshadow it. My trust was well placed and I look forward to the next project we can do together.

Working with Forrest has been a dream and I whole heartedly recommend him and his company without reservation. He will give you what you want and if you let him, he will give you what you need to make your product or project stand out in the marketplace.

Here's to your success,
